City Declares War On Mosquitoes

The City of McKinney has had spray crews at work, already, for several days to search out the hiding and breeding places of the mosquitoes. As these places are found, the spray crews move in with powerful mosquito killing larvaeciding agents that not only cut off the air supply of the wiggletails or larvae but also contains a strong insecticide that kills the adult mosquito that contacts the water or the vegetation around the water which has been sprayed. Initial efforts are pointed to the natural storm sewers and ravine areas that course through the town and then after that a systematic covering of the low marshy areas of the town where much pooled waste exists in roadside ditches, low areas etc. Along with this such areas as the City Park and the City County Hospital are being given special attention.

This work is under the supervision of the McKinney Collin County Health Unit which is supervising several simulatenous programs in other cities of the County. Winfred Taylor, City County Sanitarian states that the work is being conducted inspite of the weather in order that the present crop of mosquite larvae and wiggletails may be eliminated before they can hatch. The finding of huge numbers of larvae in drainage ditches and pooled waste areas has pointed up the urgency of keeping at the task despite the weather. Mr. Taylor points out that the initial effect of the war on mosquitoes has been to eliminate countless numbers of mosquitoes in larva from hatching out in full grown pests, but he states that the efforts needs the support and assistance of every resident in cleaning up his own premises and neighborhood. As long as we permit tin cans, piled trash, empty containers, old auto tires, rain barrels and even the innocent flower containers to catch and hold water, then we can count on having a large mosquito infestation. In many situations where mosquito complaints have been received, the Health Unit has found that little or no effort has been exerted by the complainant toward ridding his own premises of mosquitoes.

Mr. Taylor further states that the presence of many uncovered, unprotected wells throughout the city is one of the main safety and sanitation problems. A mosquito can get through the smallest opening into a well which in its darkness and coldness offers an ideal place for the raising of a new crop of mosquitoes. The gravest danger, however, is the danger of a child or even adult falling into some of these death traps. Proerty owners should certainly take every precaution to eliminate this health and safety hazard.

The very best efforts of the Cities that are doing all that they can to eliminate flies and mosquitoes will fail unless the individual residents join cooperatively in their fight by doing all that they can to clean up and take care of their own premises.

Over a 6-year test Texas 28 hybrid corn outyielded all others at the Denton Experiment Station. A yellow grain corn, Texas 28 also has shown less earworm damage and unsound ears than other hybrids recommended in the Denton area. Agronomist J. W. Gardenshire, who conducted the tests said Texas 26, one of the older hybrids, is slightly earlier in maturity and has performed equally well in the area.

He said also that Texas 36., an early yellow hybrid, was released recently for use in areas where adverse weather conditions occur frequently.

Texas 17W, a white hybrid which has been in tests two years appeared to be better adapted to the Denton area than Texas 15W. Texas 17W's large white seed is readily accepted by the mills. Both Texas 28 and 17W produced an average of 24.5 bushels an acre even though rainfall during the 6-year test period was much below normal.

WHAT IS A GOOD FOOD BUY

Choosing foods to fill the market basket is the most important job of the family food shoppers. It is her responsibility to decide which foods are good buys for her family, and a lot of considerations are involved in that decision.

If you are the family shopper, I am sure one of your first considerations will be your family's likes. Of course, you will include many of these foods in your weekly menus — but there are other points to consider, too.

The cost of the foods you want to buy plays a big part in your decision, for the part of the budget that goes into food is important to every family, and the cost is determined by the amount to be bought, the price of individual food items and their qualities and values. Knowing the marketing season helps you to buy more wisely, for most foods are usually lowest in price when they are plentiful and in season. You certainly do want to consider the nutritive value of the foods you serve your family—a healthful diet contributes to the well being of all family members. Then, of course, you will think about the convenience various foods offer, and how much time and work it takes to prepare and serve them. The availability of these foods at the market where you shop is another consideration. Your kitchen and the space and equipment in it will have a bearing too, for the limitations in this area influence the kind and quality of foods to be stored and the way they are prepared, so you as a family food shopper must consider a number of different points in order to secure good food buys for your particular family. Compare the different factors involved before making decisions at the food counters. You will need to plan, buy, prepare and serve food that meets the requirements of your family's tastes, nutrition and budget, as well as the time, energy and kitchen facilities that you have available.

Wet Grounds Delay Crops In North Texas

By FRED PASS
Farm Editor of The Dallas Morning News

The drying up comes too late for thousands of acres of Texas cropland.

Rains that broke the drouth lasted too long. Fields of oats and wheat lie close to the ground across North Texas, gray and musty from too much water and eaten away by worms; onions are waterlogged, and the best cotton lands still are unplanted.

In river bottoms of East Texas, where some of the state's best cotton crops are harvested, water sprawls everywhere today. Observers say it will take a week for the water to clear away, two additional weeks for the soil to dry.

By then it will be July — and cotton planted in June is a gamble.

The heartbreaking part is that farmers thought this was to be the great farming year. When the good rains came the crops thrived. As recently as three weeks ago there was optimism.

The picture changed drastically.

John Wells, Plano farmer and soil conservation leader, surveyed the North Texas area last week. Les than half a crop of wheat, even less oats and barley was his prediction.

Unlike normal years, this year's best grain crops are on the ridges and hills, and the gray, waterlogged grain covers the lowlands. Those fields are ont drying well either.

"While the crop was growing, it used much of the moisture," Wells explained. "Now the grain is ripe and no longer uses the water. All is does is shade the ground, keeping the fields from drying out."

Wells said oats are in the worst shape, with barley second, and wheat faring a bit better. But many wheat fields, he pointed out, will produce only five bushels to the acre.

Some North Texas farmers said the oats were ripe and needing harvest, but the fields were too wet for the combines. So the grain already bent close to the ground, was shedding.

To save what they could, farmers moved into the fields with combines as early as Thursday, reaping the grain from the high ground. It was a common practice for a farmer with two tractors to take both to the field—the second to pull the first one from the mud when it got stuck. One farmer near McKinney took three tractors to the field, got all three stuck and walked away from all of them.

Ernest Chesney, Prosper farmer who does custom combining, said many grain fields still have four inches of water in them. A large acreage of ats se said, will never be combined.

Ira McComic who farms North east of Princeton, is one of the few farmers who have a good stand of corn. He planted his corn on March 15 on land that had grown winter peas. The corn is over three feet tall, two feet taller than most corn of the area.

Roy Post of the Soil Conservation Office in McKinney explained that the tighter soils "drowned out worse than the soil that had grown the peas."

All across the Northern part of East Texas farmers are in a situation similar to E. E. Hill, who farms at Ector, between Sherman and Bonham. Hill said a month ago he thought he would make the best oat crop he had ever made. But the rains kept coming. Now, on the 120-acre oat field, he doubts if he will combine any.

"And there's no use trying to bale them," he said. "We wouldn't get anything but straw. The grain would fall on the ground."

Hill's wheat was soaked with water and "just died." On the high ground where the water damage was less severe, he said, the worms stripped it.

Hill has nearly 100 acres alloted to cotton. He hasn't planted a seed.

"I'm an early planter," he said. "I always plant in April. But I just couldn't get in the fields. If it ever gets dry enough I'll plant cotton in June. But I won't in July. That's too late for me."

He managed to put 25 acres to corn, by planting twice, and has about one-third of a stand. "I'd sell it for the gasoline I used to plant it," he said.

Recently Hill baled 35 acres of alfalfa. He and his helpers got 425 bales in the barn "using two bob-tail trucks," but then a downpour caused them to leave 390 bales in the field to rot. "We threw them in a ditch," he said. The Red River bottomland has some of the state's most productive and largest cotton farms. Today water stands over most of this land.

Friday Bowie County Agricultural Conservation Service technician Al Pace tabulated the number of cropland or improved pastures under water. About 15,000 acres was their estimate.

This includes about 3,000 acres of a farm owned by Otto and Norman Mosher. J. C. Ramage of Hooks said 225 acres of seed oats is under water. Arthur Lumbley of Hooks had just spent $110 an acre to level his land for irrigation, and the water has ruined that. About 80 per cent of the county's alfalfa crop is ruined, Lynch estimated.

E. H. Moores, who farms North of Texarkana, had 400 acres covered with water, including 100 acres of oats "ready to cut." He also has beef cattle, "so when the water is gone and the land dries out, I'll put the whole thing in sudan for summer grazing. The water ruined my grass, and my cattle have to eat something."

There won't be much cotton planted in the bottomlands this year, observers say. By the time the water is gone and the land is dry, it will be just too late in the season.

The onion acreage around Farmersville was bigger than ever this year. At the close of the week, field hands were milling about the area waiting, but the fields were still too wet for the harvest.

"We'll have a 60 per cent onion loss in North Texas," said P. Windom, secretary at the Joe Carver shed in Farmersville. "And there won't be any Number One onions this year."

Growers To Decide Marketing Method For '58 Wheat Crop

Wheat farmers themselves will decide whether they want to use marketing quotas for their 1958 wheat crop when they vote in the referendum on June 20, C. R. Hillis, Chairman of the Collin Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, said today.

Recent proclamation of marketing quotas for the 1958 crop of wheat conforms with legislative directives, the Chairman explained. Under the governing legislation, the Secretary of Agriculture must proclaim marketing quotas for the next wheat crop when the available supply is 20 per cent or more above normal.

The quotas do not become effective, however, unless at least two-thirds of the producers voting in the referendum favor the use of the quotas. The outcome of the referendum will decide the level of the available price support for the 1958 crop, as well as whether quotas and penalties on "excess" wheat are used for the crop.

All wheat growers are eligible to vote in the June 20 referendum who will share in the 1958 wheat crop from a farm in the commercial wheat area on which the wheat acreage to be harvested, plus any acreage to be placed in the Soil Bank's wheat Acreage Reserve, will be more than 15 acres.

The wheat referendum will be held in the following places in Collin County on June 20 and the polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. for eligible voters to cast their ballots:

McKinney, Princeton and Melissa Communities will vote at ASC Office, 123 South Tenn. St., McKinney, Texas.

Allen Community will vote at the City Hall in Allen, Texas.

Anna and Westminster Communities will vote at Powell Gin Office, Anna.

Celina and Weston Communities will vote at the City Hall, Celina.

Farmersville, Nevada, Josephine, Copeville and Blue Ridge Communities will vote in Basement of Post Office, Farmersville.

Frisco Community will vote at the Community Hall, Frisco.

Plano and Wylie Communities will vote at the City Hall, Plano.

Prosper Community will vote at the Co-Op Store, Prosper.

Coaches in District 35-B have selected their all-district baseball teams for 1957; the Princeton Panthers have won the bi-district crown from the Frisco Coons; opening night games in the Collin County Junior League were rained out or put off because of wet grounds, and the entire schedule in the McKinney Boys Baseball League has been postponed one week because of continued rains. That, in brief, is the sports story in the county the past week.

Champion Frisco placed six men on the all-district 35-B team for this year; Prosper had three, Celina 2 and Anna and Westminster had one each. Coaches made their nominations on ballots provided by Radio Station KMAE, McKinney.

The first team: Morris Morgan, Frisco, catcher; George Mays, Frisco, Ray Pinion, Celina, and Jerry Edwards, Prosper, pitchers; Bobby Mays, Frisco, and Tommy Bailey, Prosper, first base; Robert Shadix, Frisco, second base; Jerry Ingram, Frisco, third base; Clinton Lunsford, Frisco, shortstop, and C. Princeton, coached by James A. Godwin, beat the Dist. 35-B Champion Frisco Coons 4-3 in a single game for the bi-district baseball title. The game was played at Farmersville last Thursday afternoon after several postponements due to the weather. Weldon Corbell coaches the Coons.

Jon York was the winning pitcher. He gave up 6 hits. George Mays limited the winners to three safeties while losing the game.

Rain and wet grounds made it impossible for Collin County Junior League teams to open their seventh consecutive season Tuesday night. Teams hope to pick up the scehdule Friday. The Friday schedule has Plano at Prosper and Frisco at Melissa in the West Zone and Farmersville at Community and Wylie at Princeton in the West. Tuesday, June 11, it will be Melissa at Prosper, Plano at Frisco, Princeton at Community and Farmersville at Wylie.

Here in McKinney the entire schedule of games for the five leagues was moved from last Monday to Monday and Tuesday, June 10 and 11. Quarterback Club and Jaycee officials were unable, due to weather conditions, to get playing fields in readiness for play this week but are hopeful of having things ready for next Monday and Tuesday nights.

LETTERS FROM . . .

THE PEOPLE

THE SOUTH IS THREATENED WITH AN ORDEAL WORSE THAN THE TRAGIC ERA OF 1867 TO 1877.

Prior to May 1954 there was less racial strife in the South than there had been since the Civil War. Texas per capita for each white and negro pupil was over $70 and a heavy property tax and high priced teachers for both. During the 86 years previous the Supreme Court had held a number of times that state school segregation was not unconstitutional. But in May 1954 like a bolt from the blue the Supreme Court seemed to ignore all its previous decisions and held state segregation unconstitutional. Judge Atwell of Dallas said decision was based not on law but on psychological knowledge. Is there a clause in the Constitution that mentions school segregation? If no clause in the Constitution supports said decision is it legal? The NAACP says the 14th amendment applies to it. But Judge Warren who wrote the opinion is quoted by the Press as saying the 14th amendment does not really apply to the problem of segregation in the public schools, because when it was adopted in 1868 there were no public schools in the South. The framers of the 14th amendment couldn't possibly have had public schools in mind. If true they couldn't have intended to apply it to public schools. There is a century old rule of law which says that the criterion for construing every law is the intention of the parties to it when it was made. Does not that conclusively show that the 14th amendment does not apply to segregation in public schools? Did the court cite any clause in the constitution to support said decision? It merely said that though the school facilities in the white and negro schools were equal but if segregation is based on race that it was the court's opinion that the minor group would be deprived of equal educational opportunities. But that was only an assertion without proof. And Black's Law dictionary says that Simplex Dictum is an assertion without proof. So instead of a legal decision based upon the constitution it is a mere assertion without proof. Is it the duty of all white people to surrender their lawful rights and let the NAACP and their white allies force their children to attend mixed schools where they will be taught communist lies and that it is the duty of the whites to consent to mix marriages? If Andrew Jackson were living he would say show me a clause in the constitution that authorizes the U.S.A. to take over the schools and control them. The NAACP will demand that it be given a million super- and negro dances so as to promote visors to see that they stress white and negro romances. Will the white people consent to see white parents sent to jail for refusing to send their children to school where they will be taught communist lies?

Facts About Salk Vaccine Are Explained

Mrs. Merle Thomas, local school nurse, states that many parents have called her recently concerning information on Salk Vaccine. Mrs. Thomas refers them to the following news article, which appeared in a recent issue of the Dallas News. The article, by Dr. Phillip M. Stimson, of New York Hospital and Cornell University Medical Center, explains in detail facts about Salk Vaccine. We are pleased to pass this information on to our readers.

Despite enormous amounts of publicity, there still are many people in whom a considerable amount of misunderstanding and misconception exists about the Salk vaccine for the prevention of poliomyelitis. The following are some of the facts:

1. The present Salf vaccine is a killed virus vaccine which cannot cause any disease. It is true that nearly two years ago, two batches of improperly filtered vaccine caused a number of cases of the disease, including some deaths but enough other batches released the same spring prevented a much larger number of cases and deaths same summer if no vaccine had that would have occurred that been given.

In the 23 or 24 months since then, over 100 million doses of polio vaccine have been given without causing one known case of poliomyelitis. It is safe. A few instances of poliomyelitis have occurred in children who have just received the vaccine, but so have broken legs, measles, cut fingers, and poison ivy rashes; more commonly, little fevers; and most commonly all varieties of imaginary troubles.

All have been purely coincidental happenings that would have occurred anyway if the children had not received the vaccine, except the imaginary ailments. There still is too much emotion involved, and not enough clear understanding by many people.

2. No "live" vaccine is yet sufficiently perfected to be recommended.

3. Polio has occurred in the first weeks of life and in old people, but it is rare in the first six months or after 45 to 50 years of age. The vaccine is recommended for everybody. Everyone, man, woman, or child, with the possible exception of the very elderly should want, and be given, the vaccine.

4. The vaccine gives good, but not invariable immunity. Its protection from three injections is high. That is, where four or even more cases might have been expected to appear, not more than one develops. The statistics from last summer in Chicago, Ill., are interesting. An epidemic of 1,111 confirmed cases developed in that city. In children who had received no vaccine, the attack rate was 358.4 per 100,000 children, of those who had received only one injection the rate was 154.4 and in a considerable number of these children the first shot was given just as they were coming down with the disease, and no vaccine is good against any infection at that time.

Of those who have had two shots, the rate was 14.2, and for three shots, absolutely zero. Elsewhere, however, a comparatively few instances of polio, especially non-paralytic cases, have occurred in children who had had their full three shots.

5. At present, evidence seems to prove that three equal injections of vaccine, the second given three to five weeks after the first, and the third, or recall injection, not sooner than seven months after the second, give the best protection. If an epidemic threatens, moving the third shot up to three months after the second would be warranted, as of some value. When a fourth she is desirable is not yet determined.

6. The actual injection is practically painless and is not followed by an illness, except as a pure coincidence. The preparations of one or two of the manufacturers causes a very slight stinging sensation due to the preservative used.

7. Parental consent is usually necessary before a person under the age of 21 can be given the vaccine.

In the United States for the five years before 1956, there was an average of 37,964 cases of poliomeylitis each year. In 1956 there, was already a decrease to 15,400 cases. This is still just 15,400 too many.

An American, after touring the National Art Gallery in London, condescendingly remarked to the guard at the door, "I don't think much of the pictures here," to which the guard replied, "Sir, the pictures are not on trial; it's the spectators." These days the Salk vaccine is not on trial.

Farmersville Streets To Get Repairs Soon

Farmersville's flood-damaged streets are the due repairs, according to Mayor R. Beaver, who said that work will begin on the streets as soon as they are dry enough.

City officials there estimated flood and storm damage to Farmersville streets between $10,000 and $15,000.

"We are drawing up estimates, then we'll ask for bids and let contracts for the most severely damaged streets," Mayor Beaver said.

An asphalt machine, purchased for the city will be used to repair less seriously damaged streets.

"Until streets are completely dry," the mayor explained," we would be wasting both labor and materials in making repairs. In the meantime, we will continue with patchwork until we can do a complete rescurfacing job."

Miss Shirley Ann Reddell, daughter of Mrs. Eugene Randall Reddell and the late Mr. Reddell, R-4, McKinney, became the bride of Don Cooper, 613 South Eton Street, Perryton, Texas, in a double ring ceremony Friday evening, at 8 o'clock at the First Christian Church. Dr. Theodore R. Leen, minister of the church, officiated, Miss Mary Lee Powell, of this city and Miss Carolyn Johnston of DeKalb, presenting the nuptial music. Miss Johnston sang "Because," "I Love Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer, with Miss Powell her accompanist at the organ.

Bridal greenery, baskets of white gladioli and other white blossoms and cathedral tapers in floor standards decorated the church and altar.

The decolletage neckline was accented with bands of hand-run Alecon lace and faille and studded with seed pearls. The brief sleeves were complemented by mitts of the same material. The princess lines of the gown flaired into the bouffant gored skirt, the Directoire back fullness emphasized by a matching bow and entering into the aisle-wide Court sweep. Her fingertip veil of imported silk illusion fell in tiers from a crown of pearlized flowers and tulle leaves, and she carried a white lace fan upon which was a large white orchid with stephanotis. Her only jewelry was a necklace of pearls, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. Bob Kreigh of West Chicago, Ill., was matron of honor, while bridesmaids were Miss Jo Ann York of Dallas, Miss Caroline Thompson, of Richmond, Mo., and Miss Pat LaRoe, of McKinney. Ushers were Ralph Carr of Fort Worth; Ken Wineburg of Longview and Norman Hamilton of Lolita. Joe Charles McKinney, cousin of the bride, and Robert Clark of Pharr, cousin of the bridegroom, lighted the candles.

The couple will fly to Nassau in the Bahamas for a few days wedding trip, returning by way of Miami Beach, Florida. For traveling, Mrs. Cooper wore a suit of Elegante pure silk in the new Safari color. Her accessories were white and she wore a white orchid corsage.

The bride received her Bachelor of Arts degree in English, at Texas Christian University in May, being an honor graduate. She was active in numerous campus organizations, being president of Kappa Kappa Gamma, a member of Alpha Chi, Who's Who, Army ROTC sponsor, senior "Favorite" finalist, and Chief Justice of the Student Court.

He was elected "Mr. TCU" for 1956-57; was captain of the football team the past year, was class favorite for three years; received the football award for "Most Conscientious Player," and distinguished military awards in ROTC.
